TREATMENT

Ayun Wellness & Spa

The Javanese believe in the proverb "Rupa Sampat Wahya Bhiantara", meaning that there should be a balance between what is visible and what is inside the mind and soul. It is no wonder that Javanese traditional body care takes this balance into consideration.

A number of body care methods, such as body scrub (lulur) and body soaking have been part of the Javanese tradition since generations ago. Lulur was initially intended for self-purification before marriage, practiced specifically by the Javanese royal family. The nobles also practiced body soaking in water filled with flower and spices for their purification, both physically and spiritually.

Originated from the Javanese language, Ayun means 'supporting kindness'. And as the name implies, Ayun Wellness & Spa at Ayom Java Village is the 'supporter of kindness' for your body, treating it gently according to our ancestor's traditional body care rituals. You can experience body and face care treatment using natural ingredients.
